back to the soil in spring. Harrowing in Lime.

Lunenburg County: "I notice in your columns in The Times-Dispatch that you always advise harrowing in lime after spreading it. Will the lime lose any value if allowed to remain on top the soil. I have land sown to crim-son clover that I wish to follow with son clover that I wish to lollow with alfalfa next spring. Will it injure the clover to spread the lime this fall, or would it be better to spread the lime in the spring just before it is plowed?" The object in harrowing the lime is to mix it well with the surface soil, and prevent its being left in a lumpy condition. There is no danger that the lime will lose value on the surface, and if it is applied with a lime spreader, that applied it very evenly, matters little whether it is harrow-or not. I do not hink that spreading the lime on the crimson clover will do any harm, but I do think that you would do wrong to spread it in the spring and plow it under. Lime sinks rapidly in the soil, and we put it on top so that it will go through and affect all the soil. Then I think that you will make a mistake in sowing alfalfa in the spring. You will have ing the lime on the crimson clover will you will make a mistake in sowing alfalfa in the spring. You will have hard fight to save it from being ing or late summer sowing is far safer and better. If you have a good stand of crimson clover let it grow, and turn it in the spring and sow Whippoorwill peas, and you can either cut these for hay or turn them under in preparing for the alfalfa. Then, after plowing cliber the peas or the peas stubble, you for the alfalfa. Then, after plowing either the peas or the nea stubble, you can apply the lime, and harrow it in, and then fertilize for the alfalfa. You will do far better in setting a good stand of alfalfa to do this than to sow in the spring. The last week in August is a good time to sow the alfalfa for even early in September, so that it will get a good start and not be bothered so much with the crab grass. Spring sowing of alfalfa fails more often than it succeeds in this latitude. Then, too, S. S. S. has such specific stimulation on these local cells as to prestimulation of newspapers and magazines. of alfalfa is weaker than that of the crab grass, and the chances are that it would be smothered completely. Then, as I have said, never plow lime under deeply.

Everbearing Strawberries.

"I am interested in strawberries and want some fall-bearing varieties and the best varieties. I see the 'Neverstop' advertised. Will it do well?"

Do not allow some zealous clerk to larrup the atmosphere in eloquence over something "just as good" 25 S. S. Beware of all substitutes. I replied to just such a question yes-terday, but will say here that the only really fall-bearing Strawberries I know really fall-bearing Strawberries I know are Americus, Superb and Progressive. I have the first two, and prefer the Superb. For the main spring crop there is no better strawberry than the Chesapeake. As one large grower says in ris catalogue. If there is a better strawberry than the Chesapeake, I have never seen it. And this man has grown every kind that has come out with any promise. The Superb wiff with any promise. The Superb will give you some berries all aummer and a good many in the fall, but for a heavy spring crop of splendid large berries the Chesapeake is the best berry I know. It is not an early berry, but a mid-season sort. In fact, so far as I have observed, the very early strawberries never restriction. berries never maintain a good size after the first picking, and our grow-ers find that on high land the Chesa-peake pays best, and the Gandy on the black swamp soil. The Gandy is exblack swamp soil. The Gandy is ex-cellent on such soils but of little value on high, dry and.

Curing Ment.

I have given my method and now a dy, referring to the article in the sue for September 30, in regard to fumigating a smoke-house, writes h method of curing meat, which is well to give as a variety. Let the animal heat get out of the meat before salt-ing. Ten pounds of salt will suffice for 100 pends of meat. Rub well with the salt and pack in clean boxes and let it remain for six weeks closely covered to exclude the air. Then hang by the hock and smoke with wood daily for three weeks. The first of March, take down and sprinkle the flesh side with saitpetre, and have plenty of black pepper to sprinkle over the flesh side and pack in boxes and cover tightly. I have not seen a bug or a skipper for years." This is the old way, and good mest has been old way, and good mest has been made in this way, but I prefer the past two years in this department of the work of the church in the synod. The report of this committee, which was submitted to the synod in 1912, showed that in six of the eleven pres-byteries of the synod superintendents of home missions had been secured and were actively engaged in the west. Augusta, Ga., October 20.—Hearing of the motion of the defense to quash the Federal indictment against Thomas E. Watson, editor, publicist and politician, charged with sending obscene matter through the mails, to-day was continued until to-morrow by United States Judge Rufus E. Foster, in order to give the court opportunity to study intendents than those reported last year have been secured.

"I wish to say that I have tried your method of curing pea vines for hay, and find that it is all you claim for it I do not believe that I lost a hundred pounds of the leaves. I laid by a piece of corn perfectly level and sowed peas and the pease and grass are tree feet high. Have cut the corn and hauled it off to shock it, and am now cutting and curing these peas also. But the point is just this. With the peas and corn stalks taken off the land there will be little or no protection to the land. Would you advise turning it under now? This would leave the land bare in winter and there has been so much said of late about the leaving the land bare in winter and there has been so much said of late about the leaving the land bare in winter and there has been so much said of late about the leaving the land bare in winter and there has been so much said of late about the leaving the land bare in winter and there has been so much said of late about the leaving the land bare in winter and there has been so much said of late about the leaving the land bare in winter and there has been so much said of late about the leaving the land and sow a bushel or more of rye an are. In fact there is a chance that you can still get a winter cover on the land, and after sowing the rye it will only be the risk of some seed to sow crimson clover on the land, and if the swide is a green crop to catch the fleeting intrates and hold them to be turned back; to the soil in spring.

Every Claim Is Met. Notwithstanding the fact that last year seventy-two of the 511 churches in the synod made no contribution to synod's home missions: churches paid only a part of their apwere mistaken, for iess than half an hour after court opened, Judge Foster called the case and directed that a jury be drawn.

Melandar, and the control of their apportionment, the committee was able to present a financial statement showing that every claim had been met and an only a part of their apportionment, the committee was able to present a financial statement showing that every claim had been met and an only a part of their apportionment, the committee was able to present a financial statement showing that every claim had been met and an only a part of their apportionment to this cause and only approximation of their apportionment to this cause and only approximation of their apportionment to this cause and only approximation of their apportionment to this cause and only approximation of their apportionment to this cause and only approximation of their apportionment to this cause and only approximation of their apportionment to this cause and only approximation of the cause and only approximation of the cause and only approximation of their apportion of the cause and only approximation of the caus no debt existed at the close of the

The amount requested for synod's home missions this year was $19,500; was postponed in order that two motions might be presented to the court. The first of these was that the government be directed to file a bill of particulars, supplying the issues of "Watson's Magazine" and "The Jeffersonlan," in which the alleged obscene language appeared. By direction of the court, this immediately was complied with.

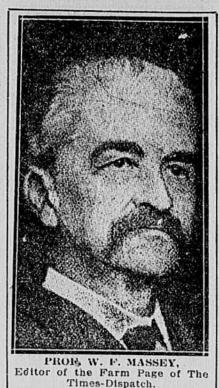

Argument Uncompleted.

The second motion of the defense, and the one upon which argument still was uncompleted when court adjournmore than $3,000 increase over what was paid to this cause last year, and the committee has made special effort to secure the apportionment allotted to every church in every presbytery. The Sabbath schools also have been requested to make at least one contribution to this cause during the year. If the committee is able to report at Danville that this apportion more than $3,000 increase over what ment of $19,500 has been paid to the work of synod's home missions, it will mark what is decidedly the most advanced step in contribution to this honorable colored man

Urging that the Episcopal Church and "a more equitable distribution of wealth," the resolution, introduced by Rathbone Gardner, a lay delegate from the Diocese of Rhode Island, con-demns the "gross human waste of the present order."

Its recommendations went into the whole question of the standard of liv-ing and relations between employe and employer.

The resolution was referred to the pensions for infirm clergy and a proposition to change the form of ordination service for bishops, so that the present obligation of the consecrated bishop will be free from ambiguity. The delegates voted by an overwhelming majority for a maximum pension of $2,000 and a minimum of $600.

Five new missionary bishops were nominated to-day by the House of Bishops at the Episcopal convention. They will be formally elected to-morrow. The Rev. Milo H. Gates, of New York, goes to the Diocese of Cuba; Rev. Hugh Burleson, of the board of missions, to North Dakota; Rev. W. B. Capers, to Spokane; Rev. F. B. Powder, of Georgetown, D.
